The information collected from this project has allowed researchers to scientifically document the current condition of our groundwater. It has also allowed us to understand how groundwater quality has changed over time (1985-present), and to identify areas of local management concern. The project is now complete and we would like to share the results! We invite you to attend an educational session to be conducted by the UW-Stevens Point Research Team. We would like to extend our sincere appreciation for your contributions to this project. Please mark your calendar and join us if you can!

media accounts, blog posts, correspondence, observations and opinions gathered regarding local actions on, and impacts of, the developing frac sand mining, processing and trans-load industries.
