From John Bowermaster: Filmmaker

We are four weeks into a ten-week long tour introducing our brand new film “Dear President Obama” to audiences across the country. The reaction couldn’t be better. So far, from Washington D.C. to western Pennsylvania, the Hudson Valley to North Carolina, we’ve screened for big crowds filled with both the anti-drilling choir and many new to the subject. Highlights have often been the Q&As that follow the screenings, during which the crowd gets to ask local environmentalists details about what’s going on in their own backyards. Obviously I’m biased, but I think the film is going to have a real impact on President Obama as he burnishes his environmental legacy during his last ten months in office. We are also going to make sure each of the current candidates for President gets a copy of the film – yes, even those who still believe that climate change is little more than an elongated spring – to help them shape their respective environmental policies.

We'll be on the road into May (and beyond!) so check out the schedule of screenings, watch often for new listings, and hope to see you somewhere along the route.
