North Dakota was turned upside down by the innovation of fracking, drawing waves of people seeking new fortunes. Pioneers, outcasts, losers, tramps, dreamers, do-gooders, failures, drifters, deadbeats, felons, freaks, dodgers, bootleggers, scum, miscreants, missionaries, stumblebums, sneaks, bastards, loan sharks, hustlers, millionaires.

A great new oil boom, unrivaled in decades had implications for the local economy, the landscape, the environment and Dakotans' sense of themselves. Author Maya Rao captures the wild tale in her new book "Great American Outpost: Dreamers, Mavericks and the Making of An Oil Frontier."

From Dr. Tom
Pearson, UW-Stout:

We are having an event on campus this week that may be of interest to you and your family and friends.

We will be hosting journalist and author Maya Rao at UW-Stout on November 8th at 7pm to talk about her new book

Great American Outpost: Dreamers, Mavericks, and the Making of an Oil Frontier.

The book is based on her experiences covering the fracking boom and bust in the Bakken oil fields in North Dakota and "portrays how the largest domestic oil discovery in half a century transformed a forgotten corner of the American West into a crucible of breakneck capitalism." Rao is currently a Washington correspondent for the Minneapolis Star-Tribune. The event is free and open to the public. More information can be found on

Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/events/2151089745178831/>

We will also be having an informal reception with the author on the day of the event from 5-6pm at the Barrel Room in Menomonie. Please feel free to stop by!

Warm wishes,

Tom Pearson
